

The Milkman in the Night

Semyon is disturbed. He has woken up in the living room with blood on his shirt, an angry wife and no idea where he was the night before. When this happens several mornings in a row, he realises he needs to investigate. After his friend Volodka follows him one night, they discover he's meeting a tall, blonde woman and accompanying her to her apartment. In the daytime he doesn't know this woman or where her apartment is and, oddly yet, someone is watching Volodka watching Semyon. Meanwhile, there are some strange goings-on in Kiev - an unemployed sniffer-dog handler makes a dangerous discovery, a single mother is providing breast milk for an unusual recipient and a vengeful cat is on the loose...

WHEN darkness falls Semyon rises. He sleep-walks the silent streets. Still, I opened The Milkman in the Night Kurkov's longest novel yet with excitement. It is brilliantly translated: unlike Kurkov's previous Lipovka village, Kiev region. Deprived of human attention, the lonely Milky Way was languishing in the winter sky. The night was utterly still. The Milkman in the Night by Kurkov, Andrey and a great selection of similar Used, New and Collectible Books available now at Amazon.
