

Graceland (Collections Litterature) (French Edition)

Lagos, fin des années soixante-dix. Une ville tentaculaire, grouillante, où grandit Elvis, un garçon de seize ans fasciné par Presley, et qui imite son idole sur les plages dans l'espoir de gagner quelques sous. Elvis n'a qu'une idée : s'échapper du ghetto, où il survit entre un père alcoolique, une mère indifférente et une bande de délinquants. Quand on a seize ans au Nigeria, qu'on s'est gavé de films américains, de reggae et de jazz, que votre mère, morte prématurément, vous a légué un trésor de tendresse, pourquoi choisir Presley pour horizon, et comment rassurer un Graceland bien à soi ? Avec ce roman intensément visuel, lyrique, à l'ironie percutante, le Nigérian Chris Abani, plusieurs fois emprisonné dans son pays pour activités subversives, a reçu aux États-Unis le célèbre prix Pen-Hemingway. On ne saurait saisir plus crûment que lui l'espoir au cœur d'un continent à la dérive. Un roman plein d'énergie et bouleversant. Abani est un écrivain dont la fluidité d'écriture est nourrie par l'observation la plus crue de la réalité. The Washington Post. Elvis de Chris Abani est inoubliable. The Chicago Tribune.
